

Activities & Organization

The MCPC is non-profit organization.

The MCPC takes roles of researching technical and operational issues, promoting joint research and development, establishing de-facto standards and encouraging the dissemination of research and development results on these, by collaborating with four industries such as communication carriers, computer hardware manufactures, software vendors and system integrators, to push the Japanese mobile computing market more advanced and expanded. We hope the MCPC would take a role of leadership in the mobile computing industry in the world.

The MCPC is working with the PCCA in the US to establish and promote mobile computing and communication standards.

Activities

1. Research technical and operational issues on mobile computing system and define policy to resolve.
2. Drive and expand the mobile computing market.
3. Improve interoperability on mobile computing system standards.
4. Contribute infrastructure development for multimedia communication in the mobile computing environment.
5. Co-work with international organizations related to mobile computing industries.

Organization

